BAGASSE

Derived from plant fiber waste left behind during the processing of sugarcane, sorghum, or agave, Bagasse Packaging embodies the ethos of recycling and resourcefulness.

Bagasse products will decompose naturally anywhere from 30 to 60 days. This process occurs organically without any external input – thanks to bacteria and other living organisms.

Whether you're packaging food products, cosmetics, or household items, Bagasse Packaging offers versatile solutions to meet your diverse needs - from containers to trays and beyond.

Beyond packaging, bagasse finds utility in various industries, including biofuel production, heat and energy generation, and the manufacture of pulp and building materials. By opting for Bagasse Packaging, you're supporting a material with multifaceted benefits for a greener future.
